 LEDA

Classic Revival finds its inspiration in the furniture styling from the mid Eighteenth Century during Louis XVI reign. A transitional period between Renaissance and Empire with influences from the Directoire style, this neo-classical look evolved between 1750 and 1800 with architectural details such as pilasters and columns and essentially rectilinear in form. Ornamental appliques were seldom used although the use of wrought iron hardware was common. The finest marquetry of the period was a key feature while many design influences from Hepplewhite and Sheraton.

Classic Revival is a neo-classical interpretation by Leda. This collection features "columns-to-the-front" of the cases and made with "bleached" cherry and very physically heavily distressed to look 'old and worn'. The finish, 'Aged Cherry' is actually recreated from an antique while the hardware is traditional with a very old 'Aged Brass' look.
